d089

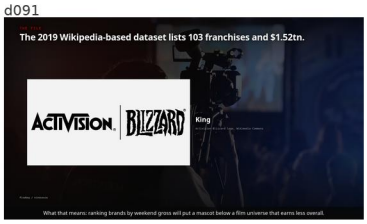

Hello Kitty's theatrical share is effectively 0.

d090

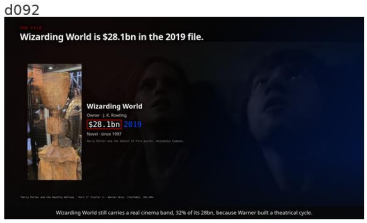

Mario's is a rounding error in that file, even after later licensed films.

d091

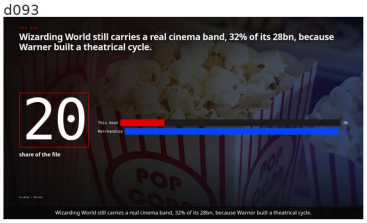

What that means: ranking brands by weekend gross will put a mascot below a film universe that earns less overall.

d092

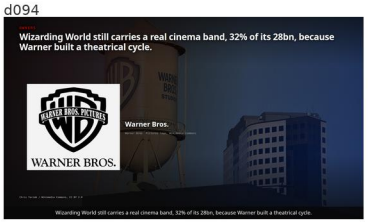

Wizarding World still carries a real cinema band, 32% of its 28bn, because Warner built a theatrical cycle.

The film, the theme park land, and the brick sets exist because Nintendo said yes, and kept the right to say how the character behaves.

d193

That is the useful contrast with a Hollywood studio that buys a library outright.

d194

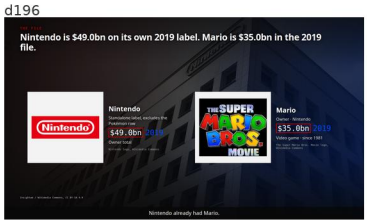

Disney paid 4bn for Marvel and 4.05bn for Lucasfilm so that the characters would sit on 1 balance sheet.

d195

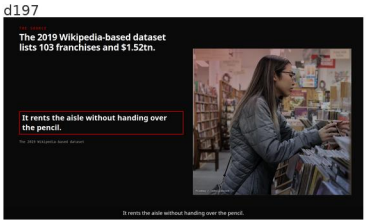

Disney paid 4bn for Marvel and 4.05bn for Lucasfilm so that the characters would sit on 1 balance sheet, then in 1 park.

d196

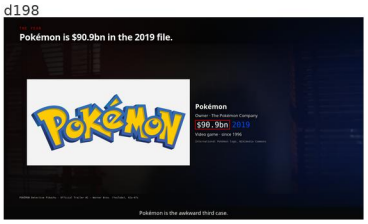

Nintendo already had Mario.
